This analysis was undertaken by a working group under the Economic Research Institute for ASEAN and East Asia (ERIA). It was a joint effort amongst an ERIA researcher, the Working Group members of the East Asia Summit (EAS) countries, and the The Institute of Energy Economics, Japan (IEEJ), with the IEEJ acting as the secretariat. We would like to acknowledge the support provided by everyone involved.

We also acknowledge Mr Victorino S. Bala, former secretary-in-charge of the ASEAN Council on Petroleum (ASCOPE), and Mr Paramate Hoisungwan of ASCOPE for providing valuable insights on the issues covered by this study.
