This study was funded by the Economic Research Institute ASEAN and East Asia (ERIA), to which the project members send special regards. The project members are also thankful to Dr. Shigeru Futamura of the National Institute of Advanced Industrial Science and Technology and Venkatachalam Anbumozhi of ERIA for their continuous support and thoughtful advice.

New Zealand is a member country of this project and, as an advanced user of geothermal technology, has been giving important input in working group meetings. However, since New Zealand does not have barriers to geothermal use, at least for power generation, it is not included in the country reports.
